London Diary:

Barrister Who Became Spare Time Actor

"HOW do you say, are you Guilty or Not Guilty?" Hundreds of prisoners at the Old Bailey have heard these words spoken by Mr J. F. B. Sharp, Clerk of Arraignment. And thousands of cinema and theatre-goers have heard Mr Sharp say the same words.

As well as being a barrister Mr Sharp is an actor. He started acting in 1895, was called to the Bar in 1905. "After all, there are strong similarities between the drama of the theatre and of a criminal court," he says.

He has often played the prosecuting counsel in Galsworthy's "Justice," and the solicitor in "The Silver Box." On the screen he usually appeared as a judge: "I suppose it was my hanging look."

Mr Sharp made his last stage appearance in 1937 at the Embassy. In 1940, after 30 years' practice at the Bar of the Old Bailey, he became Clerk of Arraignment. There he advises on procedure, keeps an eye on the jury, is often consulted on sentence.

Now aged 77, Mr Sharp retires at the end of this session. He will write his legal memoirs.

PRINCESS AS BRIDESMAID PRINCESS MARGARET, in a full-skirted, orchid pink gown, was the earliest of the three bridesmaids for the wedding of her cousin, Miss Margaret Elphinstone, to Mr Denis Rhodes at St. Margaret's, Westminster.

The Princess, a coronet of white banding her hair, was cheered as loudly as the bride.

The King and Queen arrived by the side entrance to the church just before the bride. The Queen was in strawberry pink, with a picture hat of the same material.

Prince Philip was also there. He arrived alone.

TACT IN FOUR TONGUES A NOTABLE hotelier retires after 50 years in London, New York, Rome: Mr Giulio Gelardi, general manager of the Carlton Hotel since 1935. He thinks it "time to withdraw," says for South Africa in September. He is still "on the sunny side of 70."

This remarkable personality, a bibliophile and classical scholar, was successively general manager of Claridges and the Savoy hotels in London, the Excelsior and Grand hotels in Rome, and director of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. Predominant quality indisputable is his sense of humour.

A-BOMB DEFENCE PLANNED IN COUNTRY HOUSE

The horrors have been overstressed, say men with no secrets

By VIVIEN BATCHELOR

Sunningdale, Berks.

In a 40-room house which looks like a super-cinema, in the grounds of which the late Sir Hugo Cunliffe-Owen used to train his racehorses, plans for civil defence against the atom bomb are being rapidly worked out.

Last year the Home Office paid £50,000 for the property to Miss Marjorie Cunliffe-Owen, who inherited it. Now it is the Civil Defence Staff College.

Here senior local officials from all over the world come for courses of training in atom bomb defence.

Forty doctors, including one from the United States, medical officers of health, regional hospital board officials and others whose job it will be to look after the evacuation of casualties, are on a special course.

Already 230 town clerks, chief constables, regional ARP officers and fire service officers have met to discuss defence plans.

WORLD'S CENTRE

They have come from all over Britain, from Malaya, India, the U. S. A., Singapore, Holland and Gibraltar.

Sunningdale is rapidly becoming the world's centre of civilian defence. The yellow flag with the Union Jack in one corner and the Crown surmounting the letters CD in the other, has become a symbol of hope to civilians all over the free countries of the world.

For the atom bomb does not mean immediate total destruction to a town.

Major-General J. S. Lethbridge, College Commandant, said: "The horrors of the atom bomb have always been overstressed."

There are only three typists and four clerks on the staff.

It is not all work at the college. For the late owner had a private swimming pool, a cinema and a golf course, all of which have been kept up, and new provide recreation for the staff and visitors.

The 113 acres of parkland have been let out to local farmers, but the staff are rearing their own pigs just behind the swimming pool.

PEACEFUL SPOT The local authorities pay the expenses of their representatives during their stay, and are reimbursed by the Government.

Meals are provided in the original dining room, where once large parties of racegoers were entertained.

London art galleries have lent paintings to adorn the new bare walls, and the original of "Dignity and Impudence" now hangs over the fireplace in the auditorium.

Looking out from the terrace over the park, with the lecturer's voice coming from the French windows behind him, Major-General Lethbridge said:

"It is a peaceful spot. We hope for peace. But the stronger our defence, the more successful the plans we work out here, the more likelihood I feel, we have of obtaining that peace."

STILL ILLEGAL TO TEACH DARWIN IN TENNESSEE

John Thomas Scopes still doesn't believe the State of Tennessee should have fined him $100 for teaching Charles Darwin's theory of evolution. Scopes, a tall, greying geologist, lives in a small suburban home with his wife and two sons. But back in May, 1925, 24-year-old John Thomas Scopes was a headline personality, defendant in the famous Dayton, "monkey trial."

He was the high school biology teacher who decided that the state legislature's opinion about the evolution of man wasn't as good as Darwin's.

The Tennessee legislature had passed a law forbidding anyone to teach that man was descended from any lower form of life, or to deny the divine creation of man. The popular interpretation of Darwin's theory was that it decreed that man was descended from monkeys. The legislature made it illegal to teach Darwin's theory in Tennessee.

PRESS ASSEMBLED Scopes was bewildered, but adamant. Hundreds of newspaper men assembled to report every word of the argument. Bryan, though he was to die a few days after the trial ended, was split and in fine voice. Darrow, the compelling logician, plotted a brilliant defence of Scopes and the Darwinian theory.

MADE HIS POINT Scopes himself was almost lost in the shuffle. One day he went off to a swimming hole to cool off during a noon recess of the trial. The judge didn't even reprimand him when he got back late. The great orators had ignored his absence in the heat of their debate.

Darrow and Bryan were capable men, Scopes said. "...two brilliant minds in opposite camps, Bryan full of emotion, Darrow full of logic."

But Darrow's logic could not carry the day, and the court found Scopes guilty of breaking the law. Fundamentalists rejoiced.

BACK AS TEACHER Scopes paid a $100 fine and went back to his teaching. Later he studied at the University of Chicago and did geological field work in South America for three years. Finally, he found a geological job in Louisiana.

Occasionally a newspaper man reminds him of the "monkey trial," otherwise it is a closed chapter in Scopes' life.

Scopes still believes in Darwin, and still doesn't think he should have been fined for it.

"The general public should have no more right to tell a teacher what to do in his line than to tell a priest or anyone trained in the religious field how he should lead his flock and teach the principles of Christ," he said.

But in Tennessee it is still illegal to teach Darwin's theory. —United Press.

Stage-struck Burglar

While a Melbourne audience of 2,000 was enjoying a bright programme at the Tivoli Theatre, police with torches searched the roof for a trouserless thief.

Earlier the thief had started chorus girls as they returned to the dressing room, where he was seen clad in upper garments but minus trousers, his face blackened with grease paint.

The thief seized a petticoat, dived through a window, scaled a drainpipe to the roof and it is believed escaped down another drainpipe, taking with him £1 and the petticoat.

In the early morning a bugler blows the Long Reveille as a fusilier hoists the regimental flag on the flagstaff. The bugler then marches into the church and turns over a page of the Royal Fusiliers (City of London) Roll of Honour in the Chapel.

The Book, beautifully written and bound, contains the names of all Fusiliers who fell in World War Two. The Regiment was present at Sid Barran, Agordat, Keren, Kuneltra, Endabville, Peter's Corner, Salerno, Monte Cassino and Anzio, Monte Cassino, Croce and Muzraggio, the crossing of the Italian rivers and other engagements.

In the late afternoon, the two soldiers return and the Regimental Flag in the garden is lowered as the bugler sounds "Retreat."

FIRST ACTION St Sepulchre's, by the way, is situated on the route taken by the Regiment on its first action in 1600. The Fusiliers had been serving as marines at the Nere when Prince William of Orange landed at Torbay. The Fusiliers were hurried back and we are told by Samuel Pepys, were bound to rumble through London on their way west with the Royal train of artillery.

When the Scots Guards had gone over to Prince William and the Army began to disintegrate, they returned to the Tower of London. Their loyalty to the new regime, appearing questionable, they were soon shipped off to Flanders and thus began their long and distinguished career of foreign service.

A somewhat similar ceremony is held at Westminster every month, to commemorate the fall of the Royal Army Medical Corps in two wars.

A party of four men—selected as representing the various squadrons on whose behalf the ceremony of the Royal Army Medical Corps must be solemnly performed—marches from Millbank Barracks to the Abbey and then over one page of the RAMC's Golden Book of Remembrance in the Pyx Chamber, thereby ensuring that the names of all who died in the war are in view in the historic building.

uniforms or smuggled into the camp, the escaped prisoners then travelled to Lubeck by rail and there, through the assistance of genuine Frenchmen and friendly Danish seamen, were smuggled aboard a ship and taken to neutral shores.

Eric Williams, one of the officers concerned, told the whole story of their adventures in "The Wooden Horse," which was an immediate best-seller. Adapted as a radio serial, the B.B.C. brought this epic of resource and ingenuity into practically thousands of homes. And now a film version, adapted by the author himself and directed by Jack Lee, which has just had its premiere in London and is drawing vast crowds every day, will reach the widest public of all.

It is a relief to find that, for the concluding sequence, the fierce joy of bailing their keepers. Even the latter, unusually enough in a film, are human beings and not monolithic monsters: some are bullying louts and others are peaceful creatures with an unholly fear of the Russian front.

Shot "on the spot" at a disused German camp, in Lubeck and in Copenhagen, the production bears the stamp of authenticity from start to finish and is superbly acted.

No Big Names

YOU will find no big names in the cast. David Tomlinson is perhaps the best known, and introduces just the right touch of comedy as Phil, the third of the group. Leo Gonn played the part of Peter (in reality, the prudent Peter) with quiet authority, and as John, his dashing young companion, Anthony Steele gives a most intelligent performance which would, in Hollywood, have brought him one of those fabulous contracts. Perhaps it will yet.

The film ends in Stockholm, with the three escapees bowing mockingly across a restaurant table at the German military attaché. A pity, because that is the only departure from the book, which closed on a delightful incident on their return to Britain. Landing, at an airfield in the Midlands, they were given some cold bacon and potatoes at the corporal in charge was worried because they had not brought their own knives and forks, and then taken before the Intelligence staff, composed of a major and a captain.

When they asked for some funds, the major replied that they had no machinery for giving them any money, and the captain asked: "Do you have a cheque book?" Eventually, the latter turned to the major and said: "I think we can trust them, sir. After all, they are officers."

The gymnasium vaulting horse built from old Red Cross boxes and stolen timber, which was used to camouflage the escape. A scene from the new British film.

"The Wooden Horse" Becomes a Film

IN October 1943, three Royal Air Force officers who had been shot down over Germany successfully brought off one of the most ingenious escapes of all time from their prisoner-of-war camp, and reached Britain via Sweden.

incriminating evidence, scavenged about in the rubbish carts, or probed the grounds for tunnels. It seemed well-nigh escape-proof, and various attempts to dig a way to freedom from the huts were frustrated.

Fantastic Idea

The camp—the notorious Stalag Luft III—was set in the clearing of a pine forest. Inside the wire—a strong and interlaced 12-foot double fence of bristling spikes—single-storey wooden barracks raised on piles three feet above the ground huddled together.

Are lamps hung above the wire all round the camp, and at intervals were sentry boxes on stilts, occupied by two camp guards armed with machine guns and connected by telephone to the main guard-room. At night, searchlights continually swept the grounds. Other guards carrying Tommy guns patrolled the wire between the sentry boxes, and police dogs were let loose.

In addition, special guards ferreted about the barracks, lay underneath huts or hid in the roofs listening for

THE successful escapees hit upon the most fantastic idea of all. They started their tunnel in the open near the wire. Adapting the idea of the classical Trojan horse, they built a wooden gymnasium vaulting horse, which was carried out into the compound every day and placed over the opening to the hidden shaft. The tunnellers were concealed inside the horse, and dug for four months, while their comrades vaulted away until they could hardly stand, thus merely confirming the Germans' conviction that the mad British would go to any lengths in the cause of physical fitness and sport.

Sitting On The Fence

By . . . Nathaniel Gubbins

TWO men in Britain die of worry diseases (heart arteries and stomach ulcers) for every one woman, according to the Registrar-General's 1948 survey of national health.

This may be because most men keep their troubles to themselves, whereas most women park theirs on others. Or perhaps the Rev. Eric Bailey, bachelor vicar of St. John's Church, Upper Norwood, has found one of the reasons.

In his church magazine he wrote: "What a frightful sight a woman is made to look before retiring for the night. The hair is gathered up into a kind of net strapped under the chin and the face and neck are smeared with cream."

Although this is enough to give any sensible man heart disease or stomach ulcers, and no doubt helps to keep the population under control, any husband of the upper income group can save his life by sleeping in another room.

Those in lower income groups can save theirs by getting free sleeping pills from a sympathetic doctor.

What about protection for men in their waking hours?

During the day women still wear grease, though it is covered with powder and gobs of rouge, making them look like clowns.

They also wear clown's hats perched on what often looks like a purple or violet wig.

If you can believe everything you read, they are soon going to wear wooden shields to keep their tummies flat, black lip-stick, and black polish on their finger nails.

When this happens women will look so terrifying that the streets will be like a battlefield, with dying men slumping forward, grabbing their hearts and stomachs.

Bishops will pray for peace and retired generals will write in the newspapers asking for the Home Guard to be called out.

As sleeping pills cannot be taken during the day without wrecking the export drive, dark glasses should be issued free to all British moles over 10.

This would not only save thousands of lives, but cost no more than £50,000,000—a mere trifle in the total cost of the National Health Scheme.

Trunk-love

A survey of the love life of African elephants has cost the taxpayer £225, according to a 1949-50 report on Colonial development.

If the Government had asked me first anybody could have had the story for twopenny with a cartoon by Giles thrown in. As even animals are now influenced by American films this is what happens when a bull elephant meets a cow elephant—Who are you whistling at, smarty?

You, Sugar. Didn't know there were any wolves around these parts. There's plenty. But they got trunks on em. No kiddin'?

Talkin' of trunks, you certainly have the dandiest little trunk in all Africa.

You seem em all? Don't want to see no more. Nor now I've seen yours. Bet you shoot that line with all the girls.

And those little ivory tusks. Rrrr, oh, boy. Mind if I touch one?

French guy, ain't you?

Think so? I'm strong, too.

Care for a sapling?

I was just goin to pull one myself.

Here, here. Right of the ground. Want another?

What would I do with two saplings? You can have all the saplings you want. How'd ya like sompin' big like a mahogany tree?

Don't go hurtin' yourself, big boy.

There she comes. Roots on all. Now I'll get me a tiger, and you can have a fur coat. I'll get me two tigers, and you can have two fur coats.

My, my. I shall get a pent-house on Park Avenue next.

I could make a clearing in the forest for you. That's better, any penthouse. You're a swell guy, ain't you?

Care for a drink at the stream? Now the moon's comin' up?

On the level?

Sure I'm on the level. I just wanna a drink.

I always liked drink at the stream. . . . When the moon's comin' up.

OK, then. Let's go.

World strategists

I'VE got the idea so far, old man. Russia is a giant right hand with its palm forming the Russian land mass, its thumb on Korea and its four fingers threatening points south, south-west, and west. What points?

I thought it was obvious, old man. Her index finger is on Malaya, her middle finger is pointing at Persia, her third finger at Greece and her little finger at us.

What about America, old man?

Her little finger's pointing at America, too, old man.

Are you suggesting, old man, that Russia is going to fight us and America with her little finger?

Not at all, old man. You must remember that Russia is a two-handed giant.

You didn't mention it before, old man. But if she also places her left hand on the map of the world her fingers would be pointing towards the Arctic Circle, wouldn't they?

It depends where she's standing, old man. But assuming you're right where would her left thumb be pointing?

I'll tell you that when you tell me where her left palm would be, old man.

On Communist China, old man. Let me show you. Here is my right hand with my thumb on Korea and fingers fanning out south and west.

Mind my drink, old man.

What are you going to do now, old man? I have America, Great Britain, the Dominions, and the Western Allies committed to points threatened by my fingers and thumbs I bring my hands together and crush them. Like this, old man.

There goes my drink, old man.

I'm sorry, old man. My sleeve caught the glass.

It always happens when you play the fool in a bar, old man.

I'm not accustomed to be called a fool, old man.

Nobody called you a fool, old man.

In that case I must be getting deaf, old man.

Well, never mind, old man. Perhaps we'd better forget all about it.

Perhaps we had, old man. Good-night, old man.

Good-night, old man.

Britain's Challenge To Russia To Disprove Slave Labour Charge

Geneva, Aug. 15.

Britain today challenged the Kremlin to disprove her charge that Soviet Russia had over 10 million slave labourers.

Mr Corley Smith, the chief British delegate, told the United Nations Economic and Social Council, that this estimate might be too low. In recent years there had been mass deportations to Siberia and Central Asia from the Soviet Union's smaller nations.

STRIKES HIT DUTCH MAIN PORTS

The Hague, Aug. 15.

Communist-led strikes today hit Amsterdam and Rotterdam, Holland's two main sea ports.

At Rotterdam, 2,500 of the 4,000 dockers walked out in support of the Communist-led "Trade Union" demand for a 10 percent wage increase and the retention of the shift system. As many of the remaining 1,500 workers were on holiday, the port was almost completely idle.

The non-Communist unions condemned the stoppage and appealed to dockers to resume work.

Most of the 1,000 dockers on strike at Amsterdam belonged to the reserve force, only needed at rush periods and the port was not greatly affected.

A misunderstanding about the ending of the strike brought some regular Amsterdam dockers out today, but they returned to work later.

The Communist-led Union was accused of distributing pamphlets giving the impression that non-Communist unions backed the strike.

The Amsterdam strikers voted, at a meeting called today by the Union Trade Union, to make their demands the same as those of the Rotterdam dockers.

Amsterdam workers were also out today, holding up work on all big buildings, but the three-day-old taxi strike collapsed when the companies threatened to dismiss drivers who did not resume work. Taxi services were reported to be normal today.

Road workers, demanding a five percent wage increase, also struck in Amsterdam today, bringing the port's strikers to about 4,000.—Reuter.

Yet Unanswered Question

Tokyo, Aug. 15.

More rank and file recruits are volunteering for Japan's national police reserve than are needed, but senior officers are hard to get.

Figures issued today showed that after two days of recruiting, 106,064 men have applied to join the force though it will be restricted to only 75,000. Keiichi Masuhara, Director-General of the Reserve, said that the difficulty in getting senior officers arose from the "yet unanswered" question of whether to use former army officers who were purged at the end of the war.—Reuter.

NOT DEEP

Dispatches from the Eighth Army Headquarters at 1700 GMT (2 a.m. Wednesday Hong Kong summer time) said the Communists had made no new crossings of the Nakdong and the previously reported pockets "are not deep enough to be considered serious."

Intelligence reports indicated that the North Koreans were preparing to commit their crack 105th armoured division—with possibly 150 tanks—in a decisive attack on Taegu with a diversionary offensive on the south coast.

So far, the 105th division has been sending out tank detachments, but indications were that the division might be thrown into the Nakdong offensive en masse.—United Press.

Two Early Morning Fires In Kowloon

Kowloon Fire Brigade were called out to two small fires in the early hours of this morning. The first was at 2.30. A wooden partition caught fire on a verandah of a house in Reclamation Street. The firemen extinguished the blaze in a few minutes.

About a quarter of an hour after arriving back at the fire station, they were called out again, this time to 10, Carnarvon Road.

On the second floor a settee had caught fire. By the time two fire engines arrived, the occupants had put out the flames with buckets of water.

Tokyo, Aug. 15.

The United States lost two Superfortresses over Korea in 30 days of operations ending on Saturday. Air Force Headquarters announced here today.

Seven thousand tons of bombs were dropped on North Korean targets. One of the Superfortresses was shot down and the other abandoned after severe damage.—Reuter.

Bombay Textile Workers Strike

Bombay, Aug. 15.

Nearly half of Bombay's textile workers struck yesterday in support of demands for an increased bonus. Twenty-four of the city's 60 textile mills stood idle.

Of Bombay's 250,000 textile workers, 52,000 out of about 100,000 on the first shift were on strike. When the second shift came on in the evening, nearly 55 percent of the 60,000 workers normally on the shift joined the strikers.

Strike organisers were hopeful of a similar response from the third shift, involving about 90,000 workers, due to go on at midnight.

Early yesterday reinforced police guards arrested eight people said to have intimidated strike-breakers outside the mills. Three people were slightly injured when strikers clashed with workers trying to enter a mill.

The strike was called by the Socialist-led Mill Mazdoor Sabha, and the Communist-controlled Gini Kamgar Union.

The Government recognised textile labour organisations persuaded many workers to ignore the strike call.

The strikers are demanding a bonus equivalent to three months' wages.

FIRST INSTALMENT

The Socialists are also demonstrating against the mill owners' hesitancy to pay the bonus, two months' wages awarded by the State Industrial Court.

The newly constituted Government labour appellate tribunal ordered the payment of one month's wages pending its decision on the mill-owners' appeal against the Industrial Court's award.

Most of those who reported for duty yesterday received payment of the first instalment of the bonus, as today, India's Independence Day, is a public holiday.—Reuter.

Bertha And Her Husband

Bertha Herlof, 13-year-old Dutch refugee, was married secretly recently four days after a Singapore court had returned her to her Malay foster-mother instead of her parents in Holland. Bertha's husband is a Malay school teacher, aged 21. Bertha said: "I love him. I married him. Now my parents can't have me back." Mansoor Adabi, the bridegroom, said "It was love at first sight. I welcomed her when she left the social welfare home after the Appeal Court's decision. I visited her once in her home and that was the first time I saw her." Aminah, the foster-mother, said: "My child is now happily and safely married."

Ex-Dutch Army Sergeant Adrian Herlof has appealed to the Dutch Foreign Ministry to seek the annulment of the marriage. Mr and Mrs Herlof, who once offered Aminah a home in Holland with Bertha, have six other children.

Bertha lived for eight years like a Malay child in Java when her mother and father were interned by the Japanese in 1943. (London Express Service).

Stopping Rubber From Reaching Enemy Countries

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

London, Aug. 15.

At the same time as reports are circulating that both Britain and the United States are indulging in "pre-emptive" buying of rubber, the New York Journal of Commerce says that the United States Government will impose control over the allocation of natural rubber for tyres and other products on September 1.

The United States have done all they can to "take" down the price and the imposition of new controls shows that they have failed in their purpose and are now taking sterner measures.

If America succeeds in forcing down the price—as it seems likely she will—pre-emptive buying can continue. America, and on a smaller scale, Britain, could attempt to outbid other buyers and so funnel all available supplies to "friendly" sources.

It is, of course, nothing but commonsense to take measures to prevent a potential enemy stocking up war materials, especially when these come from an Empire source. It would do nothing to increase public confidence in the Government's measures to prepare to meet aggression, if at the same time, the Government was standing by and watching only a possible aggressor lay by a huge stock of vital materials.

But the question is being asked: Is it necessary to indulge in such expensive means of achieving this purpose?

SAME TECHNIQUE

Osar Hobson, City Editor of the News Chronicle, says that Britain used the same technique to keep precious Portuguese wolfram out of German hands during the war—a move which not only cost tax payers tens of millions of pounds, but failed in its primary purpose.

But he points out that Portugal was neutral and Malaya is not. Some other means should be found to achieve the Western Powers' purpose without alienating Malayan producers, "though not without outrageous windfalls which pre-emptive buying on the free world market would give them."

It cannot be ruled out that MP's will take up this cry when Parliament reassembles shortly to discuss defence questions. This is obviously a matter which is closely linked to national defence and it should not be beyond the powers of the Government to impose controls preventing the exports of tin, as well as rubber from the British colony reaching unfriendly countries.

Indeed to neglect to do so might be construed in Moscow as a sign of Allied weakness of purpose.

TROOPS TIED UP

If, as Sir Gladwyn Jebb, Chief British representative at UN, said in a broadcast from Lake Success today, Britain has several thousand troops tied up in Malaya not only to fight Communism, but also to ensure the supply of rubber to the free world, then surely Britain could take measures to prevent rubber going to any country, but those which support freedom.

To fail to take these measures would mean in effect that British and Colonial troops were fighting to ensure the supply of rubber to Russia.

To revert to the question of American control over rubber allocation this will not lead to reduced sales to America, since the stockpile will probably absorb what is left after civilian consumers have taken all they are allowed to buy. This on present estimates would release some 20,000 tons for the stockpile. However, the mere fact that control has been imposed will influence the price. The high level of world production—civilian and military—should nevertheless assure a steady demand for rubber and maintain the price at a level satisfactory to producers.

The production of a new Hitler film has been started in Vienna, by an American film company, with Luther Adler playing the leading role. HAROLD STASSEN URGES ESTABLISHMENT OF A MARSHALL PLAN FOR ASIA

Washington, Aug. 15.

Mr Harold Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota and Republican presidential candidate, today urged the establishment of a Marshall Plan for Asia.

Mr Stassen, who is at present President of the University of Pennsylvania, made a major policy speech over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Mr Stassen urged the United States to urge notice on Moscow that further Communist expansion anywhere would bring war to Russia.

"We must embark upon a major offensive in the cold war; this requires early initiation of a comprehensive Asiatic economic programme parallel to the Marshall Plan yet different because of different conditions in Asia. It would involve only a small fraction of the amount of money spent in the Marshall Plan."

Mr Stassen, who may again be candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said the United States faced across the world an unfriendly Power with far greater military strength than either Hitler or the Kaiser.

The only safe basis for our future policy is to conclude that the ruthless rulers in the Kremlin have world domination as their fixed objective.

Mr Stassen added that the United States should make it clear that if the Kremlin directed an attack of the Chinese Communists into Indo-China or Burma, or of the Bulgarian Communists into Greece or Turkey, or of the East German or Polish Communists into Western Germany, or of the Hungarian Communists into Austria, it would not mean local action such as in Korea, but war would come to Moscow, to the Ural and to the Ukraine.

World War III inevitable. I am certain that the Communist millions among the people of Russia do not want war. I believe if the United States and her peace-loving associates quickly and steadily build sound armed strength and at the same time carry out an alert, intelligent ideological and economic offensive against Communist dictatorships, we have a better than even chance of winning a just peace without incurring the horror of World War III.

U.S. SURPLUSES

Mr Stassen said the Asiatic economic programme should involve "only a small fraction of the amount of money spent on the Marshall Plan because we do not have the resources to spend more and because the non-industrial economy of Asia has different and lesser needs in terms of dollars."

Mr Stassen said American surpluses in many cases could materially assist in Asia and cited the case of India's need for wheat.

"India has sought 30,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat from America. America has over 300,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat on hand, but America has not shipped any of this surplus to India. This is an inexcusable shortcoming in American action. American surplus wheat should be promptly shipped."

The United States could reasonably expect raw materials in exchange for its surpluses, which would be "useful to our production and stockpiles." The initiative in developing an economic programme for Asia should come from Far Eastern leaders.

SOVIET AIMS

"Such men as Pandit Nehru, Liaquat Ali Khan, Carlos Romulo and Elpidio Quirino should be encouraged to work out an economic plan for Asia. Under their leadership, America and the United Nations should move upon a far-reaching Asiatic economic advance. Such action has been requested by Congress in the mutual defence assistance act, but the State Department has not acted."

RED CHINA

One of the most difficult problems in this regard, Mr Stassen continued, was the question of Communist Chinese membership in the United Nations.

"Clearly this application should not be granted. But Britain and India voted for it. It would appear that we should ask Britain and India to join us in the United Nations for the appointment of a special commission to go to China and investigate the application."

"In spite of my grim, cynical analysis, I do not consider

By OSWALD JACOBY

"SOME players are always taking the joy out of life," said General George. "As for me, I like to spread sunshine around. If somebody takes a shine against me I root for him instead of for myself."

"I wish you wouldn't root so hard," moaned South. "I'd have won the rubber if you had only taken that first diamond trick."

South was perfectly right. George's "generosity" had cost his opponent three tricks.

West opened the eight of spades, and South won with the jack. Declarer counted up his tricks and saw that he could win three spades, two hearts, and two clubs. He needed two additional tricks in order to make his contract, and diamonds was the only suit in which those tricks could be developed. At the second trick, therefore, South led the nine of diamonds from his hand and let it ride for a finesse.

It was at this point that General George, holding the East cards, suddenly felt sorry for his opponent. Since he held both the ace and the queen of diamonds, he knew that declarer's finesse was not going to work. Obviously, George could have won the first diamond trick with the queen. Instead he threw his low diamond, "just to make declarer feel a little better."

When South's nine of diamonds held the trick, he led another diamond, and this time George took his queen. This killed declarer's chance of making his contract. Since he had no further diamonds in his own hand, he could establish dummy's suit only by entering the dummy with the ace of spades, and leading a diamond. However, this would do South no good. Once he had established the diamonds, he would never be able to get back to the dummy to cash them.

Since he was able to make only one diamond, South wound up with only eight tricks. As South entered 100 points on the enemy's side of the score pad he reflected bitterly that he would have made eleven tricks if General George had won the first diamond.

If George had made that mistake, the play would have proceeded in a very straightforward manner. Declarer would win any return in his own hand. He would then lead his remaining diamond, continuing the suit if necessary until East took his ace. Then dummy could be entered with the ace of spades to cash the rest of the diamonds. South would therefore make four diamond tricks in addition to his seven tricks in the other suits.

BY THE WAY

by Beachcomber

FROM Estimarlu to Serra Luna, during next week, the Pyrenean villagers will be celebrating the unbelievable exploits of two men who are said to have passed that way like a hurricane 26 years ago this month.

Even children know the tales told of these men—how they threw Lourdes, the innkeeper out of the window; how they passed as "Ambassadors" in Harbastro, and signed anything; anybody offered them; how they crossed the Salient in a snowstorm and lived in a cave for two days, terrorizing the neighbourhood; how they sold black-medicine to the Abbots of Nuria for their supper; how, in turn, they courted the belle of Roda and were locked in a cellar by her father (where they sat about the wine in true Christian fashion); how they told the one-eyed official at Santa Cilia that the harmless-looking Dutch tourist was a renowned bandit. One of these men, they say, was Professor Sly, the other myself. But we do not wish to boast.

Suet hits out
If we could accumulate larger and larger stocks of food, when it had all gone bad we could plough it into the soil, so that the war houses and docks would be ready to receive further stocks from abroad.
(C. Suet, Esq., at Malden Botherham.)

Horse auditions
RECENTLY the proprietor of a film theatre, noticing a horse in the audience, said that he "thought there was a future for horse auditions." And now a Lanchester club has tried to take a horse to a dance—stipulating that he should have straw to sit on. But permission was refused, for fear that farmers might want to bring bulls and sheep to dances. For my part, I want to see horses at the Opera—noisy horses, of course. What a scene there would be when Boris Godunov rode on to the stage on his white horse. What whinnying and neighing and snorting and stamping! Look, Pharaoh II, it's one of us!

An Englishman's home
TENANTS of certain council houses are now being asked to promise that if they keep pigeons, the birds will not alight on the roofs. It will not be long before a family is thrown out because a spy has seen a fieldmouse rub its nose against their gate at 3.19 on Wednesday afternoon. Reports that chaffinches are flying over gardens will be investigated by uniformed officials, who will also measure the length of the grass on the lawn, compute how much smoke comes out of chimneys, and rebuke tenants for wiping the left foot on the mat before the right.

One thousand marbles
By T. O. HARE
"YE ancient play of 32 marbles," has been revived in our village. Mr. Hare, who is a local authority, has been told that he had 1,000 marbles to give away. It took him just five days to dispose of them. On each of the five days he had a large number of applicants. Each day after the first a few marbles had been given away. The largest number of marbles was disposed of on the second day.
(How many marbles remained for disposal on the fifth day?)

High Prices Force H.K. Rubber Shoes From U.K. Market

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

London, Aug. 15.

The news that the Fung Keong rubber factory of Hongkong has decided to close down and dismiss 1,000 hands has not occasioned much surprise here. For a long time it has been felt, as our correspondent pointed out some time ago, that unless Hongkong rubber footwear manufacturers took immediate steps to lower their prices, they would be forced out of the United Kingdom market.

However, the outlook may not be so black as it seems at the moment. Rubber prices are now considerably higher than they were before the Korean war began. Most nations, especially America, Britain and Russia, are buying up all available supplies, and a lot of rubber being bought at the moment is earmarked for military production.

America has already decided to control rubber allocations to civilian consumers. Although the British Government will not necessarily take such drastic measures, the new defence programme will involve a great deal of rubber being diverted from civilian to military production.

It is possible, therefore, that Hongkong might yet recapture the United Kingdom market if manufacturers can obtain supplies of raw rubber.

But they would then be faced with the need to produce the finished article at a greater cost to themselves while maintaining prices at least at the old level.

PRODUCTION UP

Washington, Aug. 15.

The world output of crude natural rubber rose to an all-time high of 1,570,000 long tons in June, the Department of Commerce reported. The output for the first half of this year rose to 822,500 tons, or 125,000 more than the corresponding period of 1949.—United Press.

New Indian Proposal For Korea Welcomed

New York, Aug. 15. The New York Times today welcomed and supported the new Korean proposal by Sir Benegal Narsing Rau of India in the Security Council.

The Times said that "since we are basing our case on firm grounds of equity and moral law, and since, according to the Indian delegate, any decision of the Council must be founded on a cease-fire and the withdrawal of the North Korean troops to the 38th Parallel, it is hard to see that much can be lost."

The editorial continued: "It needs no prophet to guess that whatever concern the Americans, British and French may have about the Korean issue, they are nothing for a number of reasons, the most important being its insistence on the validity of the June 24 resolution of the Security Council calling for the cease-fire and withdrawal of the North Korean troops."

"Another disappointment for the Russians is to find India separating the Korean issue from the question of sending Communist China to the Security Council table as Mr. Nehru originally proposed,"—Reuter.

BEING "STUDIED"

London, Aug. 15. Sir Gladwyn Jebb, British delegate to the United Nations, has asked the Foreign Office for instructions on the latest Indian proposal on Korea, a Foreign Office spokesman said here today.

The spokesman declined to comment on the proposal, but said that it was being "studied." Sir Benegal Narsing Rau, Indian representative on the Security Council, suggested yesterday that the six non-permanent members of the Security Council should form a committee to try to end the Korean war.

The six non-permanent members are Ecuador, India, Yugoslavia, Cuba, Egypt and Norway.—Reuter.

MIXED FEELINGS

Paris, Aug. 15. The French Conservative newspaper, Le Monde, suggested today that it might be easier for Russia than for the United States to accept the new Indian proposal on Korea.

"In the present state of things it is a bold idea," Le Monde wrote, "but it will be wondered whether it would not be clever for Moscow to accept the Indian delegate's proposal."

"After a war which has ravaged their country, the feelings of the South Koreans about American democracy—if they have ever been favourable—must be rather hesitant. The USSR could make temporary concessions, knowing that time would work in their favour. This is perfectly well known in Washington, which makes discussion difficult. It is also known in New Delhi, but accepted, which results in the new Indian proposal, like the first, being received in the United States with mixed feelings."—Reuter.

Mystery Surrounds Trade Talks

Tehran, Aug. 15. Mystery surrounded the Soviet-Persian trade talks as a Persian spokesman today said that the Soviet delegation was here to negotiate a trade pact.

The arrival of the delegation and beginning of the talks was announced yesterday. Government sources, who declined the use of their names, today insisted talks were in progress.—United Press.

DEADLOCK OVER KASHMIR CAUSES DISAPPOINTMENT

Manchester, Aug. 15. Writing editorially on the progress of India in the three years of independence on the occasion of the third anniversary today, the Manchester Guardian said: "It is a great disappointment that another anniversary has come round without a settlement in Kashmir."

The paper suggested that at the very least, the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan ought to meet again. "Much depends on their seeing Kashmir in its setting in Asia as a whole," the paper said.

Referring to various criticisms levelled against the present Government of India, notably by Mr. D. F. Gorke in his recent book, the Manchester Guardian said that these constituted only half the picture.

It pointed out that the most surprising achievement of the Indian Government had been to win the support, or at least the toleration, of nearly all the different sections into which the Indian nation was divided, all except the Communists.

The Manchester Guardian wrote: "The only stable system of government is one based on consent; and the Indian Government has behaved in such a way that all the classes and parties, except the Communists, are willing to abide by the Constitution and to limit themselves to constitutional ways of effecting a change."

"In that sense the Congress Government—or rather the Congress-dominated Coalition Government—can claim to have achieved national unity and in a country which, in the time of the British Raj, was chronically disunited."

The paper commented that in the past three years, India had had a much more difficult task in maintaining that unity than Pakistan.

"The unity of purpose in Pakistan, based on the common religion, has been a chief characteristic of this Dominion on which nearly all its visitors have commented. Thus Pakistan may celebrate its anniversary with even more cheerfulness than India. For Indians, though, recognising that their Government has achieved much, are aware of the sombre social problems ahead; but Pakistan can feel that its own problems, though acute, are simpler than India's."

"Above all, it feels that it can succeed in almost any task in which the spirit of its people may be the decisive factor."—Reuter.

HOPEFUL AUGURY

New York, Aug. 15. The New York Times, in an editorial today, congratulated India and Pakistan on the anniversary of the assumption of their independence. The Times said that there were still difficulties between

Whitehall Watching Formosa Situation

London, Aug. 15. The Prime Minister, Mr. Clement Attlee, said today that the Government "is well aware of the dangerous possibilities" of the Formosa situation.

Mr. Attlee was replying to a telegram from a Socialist member of the Parliament, Mr. Penry Brockway who said: "War between the Chinese Communist Government, which we have recognized, and America is a grave possibility. I pray you to make it clear that the British support in Korea cannot be extended to action authorized by the United Nations against China."

Mr. Attlee replied: "Thanks for your telegram about Formosa. We are well aware of the dangerous possibilities of the situation. We have made it quite clear that our action in Korea is in accordance with the Security Council resolution and not concerned with Formosa."—United Press.

LONDON FUNCTIONS

London, Aug. 15. Functions in celebration of Independence Day today are informal, the Indian Parliament having fixed the official celebration for January 26.

But the Indian flag was flown on all buildings owned by the Government of India in London, and the High Commissioner was "at home" to all Indian citizens and friends of India here this afternoon.

Later tonight, the India League, which led the agitation in Britain for Indian independence, is also holding a function.—Reuter.

SHOPS CLOSE

Gibraltar, Aug. 15. All Indian shops and bazaars here closed today in celebration of India's third anniversary of independence.

Union Jacks and the Indian national flag flew side by side over Indian establishments. A telegram on behalf of the Indian Merchants' Association, sent to Pandit Nehru, said: "We have achieved great achievements during 1949. Have no doubt you will guide India successfully through the present critical days."—Reuter.

PRESTIGE HIGH

The Hague, Aug. 15. In an Independence Day broadcast to India today, the Indian Ambassador to the Netherlands, Dr. Mohan Singh Mehta, said that during the 12 months in which his Embassy had been established, it had "built up happy and cordial relations with the people and the Government of the Netherlands."

Dr. Mehta spoke from a garden party at his residence here. Reviewing the year's achievement, he outlined "the solid results" in India of trade, economy and industry, with its financial credit high.

"Owing to the sincerity and determination of its leaders," he continued, "the voice of a united India is heard with increasing respect in the world, and has made a solid contribution to the success of important international conferences."

Dr. Mehta said Indians "rejoice at the attainment of independence by our friend and neighbour, Indonesia." He added that the countries of Asia, alert and awakened, seem to look to India for leadership and guidance.

"India's prestige stands high in the world," he concluded, "and she is regarded by many peoples as a potential power for peace."—Reuter.

TO MAKE CANOE TRIP DOWN NILE

New York, Aug. 15. John Goddard, 25, of Los Angeles, sailed in the liner, Queen Mary, today en route to Africa to make a 4,000-mile canoe trip down the River Nile.

Goddard, a member of the Los Angeles Explorers' Club, is joining two French explorers in Marseilles on September 4 for the trip, sponsored by the French Geographical Society. He said they would sail up the headwaters of the Nile, travelling down river to the delta in specially-built kayaks.

Goddard was an Air Force pilot in World War II and took part in 30 combat missions in Europe.—United Press.

All-out War May Start In Middle East

Bombay, Aug. 15. General James H. Doolittle, former Commander of the United States Eighth Air Force, declared last night that a Russian invasion of the Middle East would bring about "all-out war in which Russia and America will clash."

Now Vice-President and Director of Shell Union Oil Corporation, General Doolittle arrived in Bombay today from Colombo.

"I do not know when and where the next phase of war will break out," he told reporters. "But it is likely to be in the Middle East."

In his opinion Russia would "do something smart in the Middle East—strike at various points along the periphery in an attempt to accomplish their purpose of scattering America's combat troops and weakening her power of recommitment."—Reuter.

Peking Urged To Use "Moderation" Over Settlement In Tibet

London, Aug. 13. India has urged China to use "moderation" towards Tibet, Mr. Krishna Menon, India's High Commissioner to Britain, said today.

New Soviet Equipment In Korea

Masan Front, Korea, Aug. 15.

Intelligence officers said tonight there is little doubt that large amounts of new Soviet-made equipment have been sent to the North Koreans.

The officers said that ammunition captured by the Americans in their advance on the coastal front within the last week bore pencilled dates as recent as June 1950.

The mileage on many recently captured vehicles, such as jeeps and motor-cycles, has been extremely low, sometimes no more than 250 miles. These officers said that Soviet-made equipment had undoubtedly been sent in to replace that destroyed by Americans and Korean Republicans in the seven weeks of fighting.

Some of the captured guns, tanks and weapons are not of recent design. Some guns were designed in 1936. In no case has captured equipment shown any movement in design since the Second World War, intelligence officers reported.

The report of new Soviet-made equipment came as the United States forces dug in for the expected Communist assault. Navy, Marine and Air Force fighters pounded strong Communist concentrations west and northwest of this coastal sector.

The nervous quiet continued for the second day, after a week of American advances against moderate positions.

Strategic planes reported they destroyed a column of 100 trucks speeding eastward in the Chinju area behind the southern front, plus an unidentified number of captured vehicles near Yirong, 15 miles southwest of Chinju.

Intelligence officers said they believed the large number of enemy vehicles in that area indicated a probable armoured thrust soon.—United Press.

Clash Over Coal And Steel Pool

Strasbourg, Aug. 15. British and Continental delegates clashed again in the European Assembly today over methods of controlling the coal and steel pool to mobilise the industrial resources of Europe against Communist aggression.

"We have not overthrown the divine right of kings in order to fall down before the altar of experts," the British Conservative, Mr. Harold Macmillan, told the Assembly.

Delegates from Germany, Italy, France, Holland and Denmark refused to withdraw their support from the idea of supranational authority which the British Conservatives and Socialists—in a temporary coalition—refuse to accept.

Both sides still held out hopes of a compromise.—United Press.

INTELLIGENCE TEST

1. On the third day, each of m applicants receives n marbles, where m = (n-2)(n-1) + n + (n-1) = n^2 - n + 1. There are, therefore, three possible solutions: (i) m = 5; n = 3 (ii) m = 10; n = 4 (iii) m = 15; n = 5. But (ii) is the solution, the maximum distribution is 40 marbles on the third and fourth days. (1) If the maximum distribution is 40 marbles on the second and third days, we are left with (iii). The distribution on the five successive days is: 15; 24; 34; 44; 55. On the fifth day no marbles were distributed. (London Express Service)

The High Commissioner, who was speaking to British and Indian pressmen at a luncheon in celebration of India's Independence Day, said: "Our views have been made known to the Chinese Government, but it would not be correct to say that there have been demarches from the Indian side. Whatever advice we give China on the Tibetan question would be in the direction of moderation irrespective of legal rights."

India's position in Tibet was rather peculiar. She was the only country represented at the Tibetan capital. But the Indian representative was there in an "unofficial capacity" and was more or less the successor of the original British representative who "slipped into Tibet and stayed there."

India, like Britain, recognized Chinese suzerainty over Tibet. But India was pressing China not to take a strictly legalistic view at the present time of international tension and refrain from precipitate action. In his view, there was every likelihood that China would need Indian advice.

India's Ambassador in Peking had repeatedly pointed out that the Chinese Government was totally Communist but really an "effective coalition."

PLACE FOR ALL

Non-Communist elements had a place in the Chinese Government, and there was no reason to believe that the Chinese, with their cultural and historic traditions, would not follow a realistic and independent policy.

Referring to Korea, Mr. Menon said that India's action on the Korean issue and her latest proposals had been conditioned by the desire to continue to do her utmost to limit the conflict.

India had never asked that the Korean and Chinese issues be taken up together, nor had she ever suggested a solution outside the Security Council.

Asked about the latest position on the Kashmir issue and whether India had agreed to partition, the High Commissioner said that India had not ruled out any reasonable solution to the conflict even if she had not herself suggested partition.

But his information was that Pakistan had declared itself against any partition of Kashmir.

The effort toward a solution, however, had not broken down and would continue, he said.—Reuter.
